Rapid transit line being built for comfort and speed

► 20 per cent ridership increase expected but no fare hike, officials say ► Bike and walking paths along route to get upgrade

A new rapid transit line will save bus riders time and traffic headaches and won't cost them an extra cent in fares, transit officials said yesterday.

While the grand opening of the $138-million Southwest Rapid Transit Corridor isn't slated until next year, local media were offered a tour highlighting the progress of construction since it began in 2009.

In terms of time-savings, people travelling from downtown to the University of Manitoba or Fort Richmond can expect to save about 10 minutes off a trip that currently takes 45, said Bill Menzies, Winnipeg Transit's manager of service development.

"It will also be much more reliable because the bus is out of traffic. Right now on the street routes going out to that part of town they get tied up in traffic," he said.

"Speed and reliability will be a huge improvement for passengers."

Not to mention the comfort factor.

Modern, air-conditioned buses will operate on rapid-transit routes, and will each be equipped with elaborate GPS technology and security cameras as a passenger safeguard, transit officials said.

The agency is also building station houses at several points along the line that feature heated waiting areas, electronic signs to update wait times and pedestrian accessibility.

The southwest corridor is stage one of a plan approved by city council in fall 2008. Menzies said stage two — an extension of rapid transit to the University of Manitoba — still requires coun-

Derksen killer appeals

The man convicted in one of the most haunting homicide cases in the city's history has launched a sweeping appeal in hopes of gaining a new trial.

Through his lawyers, Mark Edward Grant alleges the Court of Queen's Bench justice who oversaw his murder case made 18 specific errors that he believes should result in a rehearing.

Grant, 47, is appealing his second-degree murder conviction and the sentence of life in prison without parole for 25 years handed to him May 26 in connection to the 1984 death of Candace Derksen.

Derksen, 13, disappeared after school on Nov. 30, 1984. She was found hog-tied and frozen to death in a shed near the Nairn Overpass weeks later. The shed was not far from her home.

The case went unsolved until 2007, when Winnipeg cold-case investigators came forward and charged Grant with first-degree murder, saying they found DNA evidence to link Grant to the crime scene.

Grant's grounds for appeal range from saying Justice Glenn Joyal erred by allowing jurors to hear a statement he gave to missing persons investigators at the Remand Centre not long after Derksen disappeared to issues relating to the testimony given by the Crown's expert DNA witness.

The Crown has not filed a rebuttal, and a date to hear the appeal has not been set. JAMES TURNER

Pedestrian killed after being struck by truck

► Police said little about the circumstances of the crash but added traffic investigators were probing what happened

JAMES TURNER
@METRONEWS.CA

An elderly pedestrian was struck and killed by a large truck as he tried to cross a downtown street with the light, a witness to the fatal crash said.

Lance Gower, 27, was in his company van at Main Street and Higgins Avenue at about 12:20 p.m. yesterday when he saw a semi-trailer run over a man after turning east onto Higgins Avenue, Gower said.

The man was crossing Main Street, heading south at the controlled intersection, when he appeared to fall as he passed the middle of the road, said Gower.

"It looked like he either tripped or stumbled, and then he fell underneath the back wheels of the semi," he said. He was dragged about a metre and a half before the truck came to a stop.

Police officers were nearby and quickly closed off the crash scene as on-lookers gathered.

"They kind of just took care of everything," Gower said.

The intersection remained closed until shortly after 4 p.m.

Gower described the dead man as an "older gentleman" who used a cane, and it appeared he had the right-of-way.

"The truck driver wasn't paying attention to what he was doing, that was plain and simple," Gower alleged.

Bid to save wheat board

- ▶ Manitoba launches campaign to stop shutdown of 'farmer-run' board
- ▶ Province would consider legal action if necessary: Premier

DACEY
WINNIPEG@METRONEWS.CA

The province of Manitoba launched a media campaign yesterday in a bid to save the Canadian Wheat Board, saying farmers should be the ones to decide how it's run.

The campaign, which includes radio and television spots, is in response to Federal Agriculture Minister Gerry Ritz's announcement immediately after the federal election that his government will dismantle the CWB next year.

"The Harper government believes that the last federal election gave it the mandate to dismantle a farmer-run organization. That logic, frankly, escapes me," said CWB chair Allen Oberg.

Premier Greg Selinger said three out of four farmers want the right to vote on whether or not the CWB should be dismantled. Currently, all wheat and barley producers must market their grain through CWB.

Selinger said the demise of the wheat board will mean more than the loss of 400 direct and 2,000 indirect jobs in Winnipeg. It will also have serious effects on the town of Churchill, the only inland shipping port on the Prairies.

Selinger acknowledged the campaign is an unusual step, and said he has not talked to Minister Ritz or to the other Prairie provinces. He said the province will consider legal action if it fails to see a vote.

Ritz called the actions of the Manitoba government disappointing.

"It's disappointing but not surprising that the Manitoba government would be against an open and competitive market that would attract investment, encourage innovation and create value-added jobs," Ritz said in a statement.

A loss of Facebook?

- ▶ Report suggests website losing ground in Canada
- ▶ Developing countries picking up the slack

The head of Facebook Canada says there's still plenty of room for the social networking giant to grow north of the border, but some new numbers suggest that may not be the case.

A report from trend-tracker Inside Facebook says the number of Canadians using the site has dropped by about 1.52 million to 16.6 million.

Canada's numbers reflect a global trend suggesting that Facebook use in a country seems to plateau when 50 per cent of the population is signed up.

Some 49.27 per cent of Canadians use Facebook, says another trend tracker, Socialbakers.

But Jordan Banks, managing director at Facebook Canada, says he doesn't believe Facebook use in Canada is slowing.

"I don't think we're plateauing at all," he said in an interview this year. "When you take a look at ... how many times they come in a given month to how much time they spend, pages viewed — it continues to grow at a very rapid rate," he said.

Pensions, wages block Air Canada deal

A "huge gap" remained in two key issues in last-minute negotiations between Air Canada and its union representing 3,800 customer-service and sales staff, the head of the Canadian Auto Workers said yesterday in the runup to a strike deadline of 12:01 this morning.

The two sides reached agreement on some issues but the major stumbling blocks of wages and pensions were outstanding as talks continued at a Toronto hotel.

"We did a lot of work but it just seems to me that we should be moving a little bit quicker than we are right now," CAW President Ken Lewenza said yesterday.

He said the union's proposal, submitted Sunday, aims to provide members with pension security and wage increases after a decade of uncertainty, but acknowledged there was "a huge gap" between the sides on the two key issues.

"At the end of the day our members have had 10 years of significant sacrifices. Now it's time to make some progress, and wages are a big key to getting an agreement."

Air Canada declined to discuss the negotiations, but said it was working toward reaching a settlement that "respects our employees and ensures Air Canada's long-term sustainability without a labour disruption."

Strike is 'digging to the bone': Canada Post

Urban Canadians aren't getting letters today, but the union representing striking postal workers wants you to know that wasn't its decision.

Canada Post is limiting letter delivery in cities to Monday, Wednesday and Friday because the postal service has lost $65 million since the strike began, officials said yesterday.

"They are digging to the bone. They are pushing major customers to go to the competition," Canada Post spokesman Jon Hamilton said.

But the Canadian Union of Postal Workers countered that the limited delivery will disrupt mail service to more people in one day than the union's rotating strikes have in total so far.

Calling the move a "partial lockout," CUPW president Denis Lemelin accused Canada Post of trying to force Ottawa to legislate the postal workers back to work.

But as of yesterday, the government appeared to have ruled out back-to-work legislation for now.

Expressing concern about the impact of the dispute on the economy, the parliamentary secre-

THE TRUTH ABOUT LIFE IN A CUBICLE

SHE SAYS ...

JESSICA NAPIER
METRO

I used to think Office Space was a hilarious comedy about disgruntled co-workers at a fictional software company. After working at a desk job for a little more than a year now, I have come to realize that the film is actually an extremely factual documentary.

While watching workplace-centric sitcoms and movies prepared me for the murderous feelings I would develop toward the photocopier, there are some realities of office life that you just can't anticipate until you start working in the trenches — or, in this case, the cubicle. Here are 10 things I've learned so far:

1. While the average workday lasts eight hours, you will only need to put in approximately three hours of real work. The rest of your day will be spent making to-do lists and looking at celebrity blogs.

2. You will be expected to eat a lot of cake. In order to avoid offending your co-workers, you will have to fake it with a slice of bad store-bought vanilla cake about once a month.

3. If your name is Jessica, someone will call you "Jennifer" at least once a week.

4. The coffee brewed by the communal machine in your office kitchen is the worst cup of coffee you will ever taste. However, after refusing to drink it for a month or two you will eventually give in because ... well, it's free.

5. When you buy yourself flowers, everyone will assume you have a secret admirer. If you like to be entertained by gullible co-workers, you will run with it and invent a fictional lover named Carlos who just loves to spoil you.

6. At some point, your boss will want you to befriend him or her on Facebook. You will spend two hours untagging photos of yourself posing as a drunken (insert wildly inappropriate theme-party costume here) before you begrudgingly confirm the friend request.

7. The time it takes to complete an assignment has nothing to do with your own productivity but is entirely reliant on the number of bosses you have and how likely they are to disagree with one another.

8. Even if your co-workers earn more money than you, they will still steal your food.

9. The IT manager is your best friend. Especially if you have a habit of spilling water on your keyboard or downloading viruses.

10. When you write lengthy emails with flowery language that would have made your grad school professor weep with pride, no one will care. After one month, all of your emails will contain only two words: "See attached."

Worth mentioning

LONDON. A 40-year-old American man living in Scotland said yesterday he is sorry for posing as a Syrian lesbian blogger who offered vivid accounts of life amid revolt and repression in Damascus, a hoax that has exposed the difficulty of sifting truth from fiction online.

Tom MacMaster said he created the fictional persona of Amina Arraf and the Gay Girl in Damascus blog to draw attention to conditions in a Middle East convulsed by change.

"I never meant to hurt anyone," the Edinburgh University grad student wrote in an apology on the blog. The university said it had suspended MacMaster's computer privileges while it investigated whether he had breached its rules.

Gay-rights activists and bloggers say MacMaster has endangered real people who are trying to tell their stories in authoritarian societies.

"He completely stole the limelight of real LGBT bloggers and activists in the Middle East and diverted it in a negative way," said Dan Littauer of the website Gay Middle East.

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

After years of making a fortune off of his elastic face, Jim Carrey is still finding new ways to manipulate it — though not all of them are intentional.

"My face kind of operates on its own nowadays. It just kind of does what it wants to do. Sometimes it's appropriate and sometimes it's not," he says.

"Sometimes in the editing room, we'll go, 'That's not human. We want to take that out.'"

After a few live-action roles that required less facial manipulation, Carrey returns to the type of mugging that made him famous in his latest, Mr. Potter's Penguins, which pits his neat-freak corporate real estate broker against six new waddling house guests — played by a mix of animatronics, CGI stand-ins and real, live penguins. It was a working environment more than a little challenging.

"The set was so cold that I was fighting pneumonia the entire time," he says. "Then there was going outside when it was 75 or 80 degrees in five layers of clothing and a parka."

Acting challenges aside, Carrey cops to an affinity for his flightless co-stars. "I think that's why we love penguins, because they don't belong anywhere," he says. "They're wobbly and vulnerable, and they're not really fish and they're not really birds, and that's how I feel. Probably a lot of people do."

A return to more physical comedy also meant a return to childhood for the 49-year-old actor.

"I find I'm still doing things and little tricks and fun things that I created when I was 10 years old," he says.

NEW HOPE FOR HAIR LOSS Laser Hair Therapy

USING TLPTM

TLPTM IS A "NEW" NON-SURGICAL SCIENTIFIC APPROACH FOR MEN AND WOMEN TO HELP CONTROL THINNING HAIR, BALANCE AND PROBLEMS ASSOCIATED WITH THE SCALP.

This cold laser creates a soft halo of light around the scalp. Laser hair therapy is a medically tested, safe and proven method using low level laser energy, or "soft cold" laser light to effectively treat and control problem hair loss and encourage new growth.

WILL IT WORK FOR ME?

Laser Therapy is equally effective for both men and women. Most participants will see tangible response within a short period of time after commencing treatment, with results enhanced as the program continues.

In fact, past studies have shown a 99% increase in hair among the respondents using Cold Laser Therapy. For those clients not able to come to our clinic on a regular basis, a home laser program is available.

During your initial consultation and assessment, it will be determined if you are a good candidate for Laser Therapy. If so, your results are assured and backed by our exclusive guarantee.

They're not sick jokes, but rather jokes for the sick.

A new, non-profit company called Patient Commando is making sure that stories about health struggles — both sad and funny — get told and listened to. Laughter therapy has long been known as a powerful tool to release tension and get the blood pumping more efficiently.

In Patient Commando's promotional video, a

Donning his hat, socks and shoes, he tries to make a dignified exit, but his hospital gown isn't done up and his bare bum jiggles hilariously for all to see.

The company will be conducting public "laugh therapy" workshops at the Centre for Social Innovation in Toronto from June 15 to July 30.

Forgiveness is the key to personal development and the tool that will guide you to go past resentment and not stay hung up on negative thoughts. It may sound tough, but the first step is to identify the people you resent and you need to forgive and let go of the negative situation. This resentment is lowering your energy so moving on will give you the impetus to move forward.

Meditate

Meditation isn't about big Buddhas, spirituality and fluffy pillows — it doesn't have to be done one 'way'. It can be as simple as sitting and listening to a song that makes you feel good as you focus on your deep breath.

What you do

- 1 Stand on your hands and knees in a table top position making sure your knees are set directly below your hips and your wrists, elbows and shoulders are in line and perpendicular to the floor.
- 2 As you inhale, lift your sitting bones and chest towards the ceiling, allowing your belly to sink towards the floor. Lift your head to look straight forward. Beginners can protect their neck by broadening across the shoulder blades and drawing the shoulders down away from the ears.

- 3 Exhale, coming back to neutral tabletop position on your hands and knees. Repeat 10 to 20 times.

Benefits

Stretches the front torso, neck, abdominal organs and spine. Provides a gentle yet firm massage to the spine, kidneys and abdominal organs. Aids digestion and elimination. Opens up the hips, eases neck and shoulder stress and tension. Improves posture.

These Sloppy Joes start with the intensely flavoured base of tomatoes, beef and pig products. Then they get spooned onto toasted deli rolls and topped with provolone cheese and tossed under the broiler for a minute or so. The result is a beefy sandwich that will leave everyone at the table satisfied.

Preparation:

1 In saucepan over medium-high, combine olive oil, garlic, onion, paprika, basil and oregano. Sauté until onion is tender and seasonings fragrant, about 5 minutes.

Is it possible for the Sloppy Joe to be even sloppier? Yup

2 Add ground beef and prosciutto. Sauté until beef is cooked through and prosciutto begins to brown, about 8 minutes.

Add tomato sauce, ketchup and vinegar and bring to a simmer. Stir in Parmesan, season with salt and pepper.

3 Set oven to broil. Arrange bottom halves of rolls on a baking sheet, then spoon some of the sloppy Joe mixture onto each. Top each with a slice of provolone, then broil just until cheese starts to melt. Top with the other halves of the rolls.

If you're looking for a relatively guilt-free lunch that focuses on organic, healthy and local then do your body some good at Fresh Café.

Owned by three sisters, Fresh Café has extended summer hours and one of the most spacious patios on Corydon strip.

Fresh serves up a full day breakfast menu and a fantastic lunch menu at 11 a.m. The service is always friendly and the food always fresh.

Fresh Café's turkey burger ($13.50) is moist and juicy, not easy with such a lean meat. With aged cheddar, spinach, sprouts and sweet Saskatoon relish, it's a perfect lunch. A fresh salad of mixed greens, beets, radishes and apples complete the plate.

Something from its fresh juice and smoothie menu is a great on-the-go alternative. I add a Royal Zing ($4.75/12 oz), a bright combo of beet, carrot, apple, ginger and lemon.

Chances are you'll feel good after a visit to Fresh Café.

Their story:

My fantastic husband, Dino, and I (Jennifer) met on a blues cruise on a gorgeous, hot and sunny Canada Day in 2007.

It was a scenic four-hour boat tour around Vancouver's stunning False Creek and English Bay.

The day's entertainment featured a band I'd wanted to see called Brickhouse.

I was there with a girlfriend and while she was off mingling, I wandered up to the front of the boat to drink in the view.

There were so many people already lining the bow's edge that there wasn't room for me and I had to hang back.

All of a sudden a very handsome man with a great smile (Dino) turned around and said, 'Come on up!' and scooped over to make room for me.

Sparks flew that night, and just over a year and a half later, on my birthday, he proposed!

We had a wonderful wedding day in June 2010 and are enjoying every adventure that comes our way.

To Angela's point, hanging out separately with friends is totally healthy — so long as you don't start ragging on your partner after she or he has been out with them.

That will lead you down the path to problems.

Besides, if you're going to start knocking on someone, better to do it together. It's more fun that way.

Does cheating need to be physical? No, say Americans

Jon Austin's wife, Amy, had a blunt assessment for her husband as the Minneapolis couple watched Rep. Anthony Weiner's stunning confessions on television last week.

"You'd be dead," she told him.

Regardless of his professional future, it's Weiner's predicament at home that seems to be launching countless discussions among couples like the Austins. And this time, it's not a question of actual physical cheating — a la Eliot Spitzer and his prostitution scandal — but the murkier backdrop of Internet relationships: sexting, tweeting lewd photos, emailing.

If it's virtual, does it constitute infidelity? Many Americans seem to think it does.

BE A FOOD SCROOGE

FUN AND FRUGAL

LESLEY SCORGIE
MONEY@METRONEWS.CA

Two weeks ago I met the brains behind a novel and frugal online grocery business, Tim Ray of Foodscrooge.com.

Inspired by websites such as Groupon.com, this dynamic 30-year-old entrepreneur developed the foodscrooge.com concept while completing his Queen's MBA entrepreneurship course.

The business was formally launched in March 2011 and thus far, it's a hit!

The big idea behind foodscrooge.com is to sell large quantities of discounted premium quality foods, such as T-bone steaks or tortellini, directly to the consumer from the manufacturer.

Many products are organic and produced locally. The discounts are offered because of the manufacturer has either overstocked inventory or wants to promote a particular product.

Foodscrooge.com subscribers get a notification of a weekly sale item by email. They buy the product online at a 40 to 80 per cent discount to retail price and then pick it up from a local grocery retail location that foodscrooge.com has partnered with. The consumer saves big bucks simply by storing their bulk purchases in a freezer.

If you're into bulk buying or are hosting a barbecue this summer, check out foodscrooge.com.

Give Dad a memorable day

ALISON GRIFFITHS
MONEY@METRONEWS.CA

What a difference a generation makes. Back when my kids were small, Father's Day was under or overdone pancakes, handmade cards, a walk in the park and an extra glass of wine at dinner.

Now, we're talking barbecues, iPads, golf clubs and other products that put a serious dent in your wallet. With personal, non-mortgage debt per capita hitting an all-time high of $26,000, it's time for one word. Don't.

How much sense does it make to take on debt for a gift that says I love you, to the father or man in your life? None at all.

On the other hand, traditional cheaper gifts aren't necessarily appreciated. According to a recent TD Credit Cards survey, 65 per cent of dads are unimpressed with yet another tie on Father's Day.

Joining the list of Dad's day clichés (read, please don't buy one for me) are coffee mugs and DIY tools. A tool can be cool but if Dad is struggling to keep up around the house he might not want a reminder that there's more to be done.

So what's a daughter, son or wife to do? My vote goes to a picnic complete with a fun activity such as catch, Frisbee, a putting contest, an old-fashioned game of horseshoes or a bike ride.

Roast a chicken or fish fillets the night before, add a potato or pasta and green salad, throw in a fresh baguette with a soft, extra creamy cheese, grab some sinful cookies at a local bakery or make a batch of brownies — and you're done!

That's it! No shopping. No mall. No pressure. And we do feel pressure over Father's Day. The TD survey discovered that nearly 40 per cent of Canadian sons, daughters and wives are stressed over finding an appropriate and affordable gift. So give yourself a break and the man in your life a memorable (and inexpensive) day.

Get creative

Make this Father's Day one to remember.

- ▶ Take him to a place he's never been.
- ▶ Offer him a taste he's never tried.

► Boston's Milan Lucic scores a goal against Vancouver goalie Roberto Luongo in the first period last night.

► Bruins chase Luongo from the net with three early goals, send series back to Vancouver

The Boston Bruins put Roberto Luongo and the Stanley Cup back on the shelf.

After another home scoring spree against Vancouver's wildly inconsistent goalie last night, the Bruins are making one last trip west for the big finish to these dramatic Stanley Cup finals.

Brad Marchand, Milan Lucic and Andrew Ference scored in the first 8:35 to chase Luongo from his second straight game in Boston, and the Bruins emphatically evened the finals with a 5-2 victory in Game 6, sending the series to a decisive Game 7 in Vancouver tomorrow night.

BRUINS	CANUCKS

For the sixth time in the last 10 seasons, the final has been stretched to its limit. The home team hasn't lost in this series, with Vancouver winning three one-goal games and Boston posting three blowout victories.

Henrik Sedin scored his first point of the finals with a late power-play goal for the Canucks, who flopped in their attempt to win their franchise's first championship. Maxim Lapierre also scored in the third period for the Canucks, who will get one last try at a Rogers Arena filled with worried Vancouverites hoping their maddening team can come through.

Tim Thomas made 36 saves for the Bruins, giving up two third-period goals while burnishing his credentials for the Conn Smythe Trophy as Boston moved one win away from its first championship since 1972. Thomas has given up just eight goals in six games in a virtuoso performance in the finals — but the spotlight in Game 6 was trained squarely on the other net.

After Luongo led Vancouver to the brink of a title with a stellar performance in a 1-0 victory Friday, the Canucks hoped to celebrate in Boston. The Bruins cancelled that Garden party with yet another stunning barrage of goals against Luongo, who was ventilated for 15 goals in just over 4½ periods in Boston.

Boston even set a cup-final record with four goals in 4:14 while chasing Luongo and welcoming his backup, Cory

Schneider, with a goal from Michael Ryder. Mark Recchi had two assists during the flurry.

Boston has lost its last five trips to the finals, never even reaching a seventh game — but the Bruins can hang another banner in the Garden rafters with one road win.

And the Bruins have ample experience in Game 7. They've already played two in these playoffs, beating Montreal in the first round and Tampa Bay in the Eastern Conference finals — but both of those games were at home, where Boston finished the post-season with 10 wins in its last 11 games. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

King James still without NBA crown

► LeBron's most scrutinized season ends with puzzlingly lacklustre finals

There were seven seconds left in the NBA season and the Dallas Mavericks were beginning their championship celebration when LeBron James started slowly walking toward Dwyane Wade, his right hand outstretched.

A quick embrace, and with that, the off-season began.

For the Miami Heat, it's time to regroup.

Changing locales did not bring change to the ultimate outcome for James, whose eighth NBA season and first in Miami ended the same as his seven in Cleveland — without a championship. He took a swipe at those who criticized him and the Heat, saying the quality of their lives will not improve because he failed to win a title.

"There's no distractions that can stop me from trying to chase an NBA championship," James said Sunday night, after Game 6.

The Heat had the home-court edge, were perceived as favourites and came into the finals flying high after needing only 11 games to get past Boston and Chicago.

Then ... thud.

A Game 1 win was followed by a Game 2 collapse, and the series was never the same as Dallas won four of the final five contests.

Dallas rejoices

The Mavericks returned home yesterday, cheered by hundreds of fans celebrating the team's NBA title at Love Field airport in Dallas.

► The championship, the first in the team's 31-year history, is a breakthrough.

► The franchise was once one of the worst in the NBA and, even after owner Mark Cuban's infusion of cash, had a reputation of failing to win big games.

"There's no hiding," said Chris Bosh, who doubled over crying in the bowels of American Airlines Arena after Game 6. "In the NBA you play a series, best of seven games, usually the better team is going to win."

"So we've got a lot of work to do. We have to go back to the drawing board. It hurts to come this far and come up short."

NHL

MacLean to coach Sens, sources say

Detroit Red Wings assistant Paul MacLean has been hired as the new coach of the Ottawa Senators.

Two people familiar with the decision confirmed the move yesterday, speaking with The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because it had not been formally announced by the Senators. The hire was first reported by ESPN.com.

The Senators fired head coach Cory Clouston and two assistants in April after the team failed to qualify for the playoffs for the second time in three seasons.

MacLean has spent the past five years as an assistant in Detroit, helping the team win the championship in 2008. He and Wings coach Mike Babcock also worked together for two years in Anaheim, taking the Ducks to the Stanley Cup final.

MacLean spent 11 seasons in the NHL, playing in 719 games for Winnipeg, Detroit and St.

Louis from 1980-91. He finished with 324 goals and 349 assists.

Prior to joining the Anaheim coaching staff in 2002, the Antigonish, N.S., native was head coach of the Quad City Mallards of the United Hockey League. He also spent time coaching minor-league teams in Kansas City and Peoria, Ill., and has been assistant coach with the Phoenix Coyotes and a scout for the St. Louis Blues.

In Ottawa, MacLean will be working for general manager Bryan Murray, his old boss in Anaheim. Murray, who recently received a three-year contract extension, has fired three coaches since he left the job himself to become GM after the Senators reached the final in 2007. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NBA enters off-season of uncertainty

As Dirk Nowitzki and Dwyane Wade traded big shots in a thrilling NBA finals, with fans tuning in at levels the league hadn't seen since the days of the Kobe-Shaq Lakers, the questions came more frequently.

How can commissioner David Stern tell all those viewers to go watch something else?

How can they shut it down now?

"It's an odd position, when the game is the best it's ever been, when the ratings are the highest they've ever been, when the excitement is the greatest it's ever (been)," players association lawyer Jeffrey Kessler said last week. "It's sort of odd to see the owners say we're going to destroy this game unless you change this whole system. Players just want to play."

When the Dallas Mavericks finished off the Miami Heat Sunday, it sent the NBA into a most uncertain off-season.

Owners and players are nowhere close on a new collective bargaining agreement to replace the one that expires June 30. Without a new deal, players say they have been told by the owners they will be locked out.

The NBA was reduced to a 50-game season by a work stoppage in 1998-99, and the loss of games is a threat now. Citing league-wide losses of about $300 million US this season, the league hasn't budged on its desire for significant changes to the financial structure, ranging from reductions in the length of contracts and the amount of guarantees, to an overhaul of the salary cap system that would prevent teams from being able to exceed it, as they can now under certain exceptions.

The championship clincher was the highest-rated Game 6 ever on ABC, in large part because of the Heat, whose star power created a must-see team.

The re-emergence of teams like the Chicago Bulls and, to a lesser extent, the New York Knicks over the last season has also piqued interest in some of the NBA's traditionally strong markets. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
